ECHOES FROM THE OXFORD COUNTY W. C. T. U. CONVENTION.

The annual convention of the Oxford county Woman's Christian Temperance Union opened at the Universalist church Norway, Wednesday morning,
May 22nd. The President, Mrs. E. A.
G. Stickney of Brownfield was present and presided at all the sessions with her usual grace and dignity. All the county officers were present.

The church was prettily decorated with potted plants and cut flowers, while on the platform the picture of Frances Willard stood upon an easel which was draped in a beautiful silk flag of the national colors, which Oxford county unions won at the last state convention for securing the large-est list of subscribers to the Union Signal in proportion to its membership.
On the right of the organ was hung the Oxford county banner and on the left another prize banner bearing the picture of Mrs. L. M. N. Stevens with the date Sept. 28, 1890; this banner was won for securing the largest percent. of new membership.

All the county officers responded to the roll call. After the devotional service with which the meeting opened, led by Mrs. Pottle of Buckfield, the convention was welcomed in a most cordial manner by Mrs. Leona Tubbs, president of Norway Union. Mrs. Eva Orway, in response, gave a short historical sketch of Norway, showing it had done its part in the reforms of our state and country.

The county vice-president at large, Mrs. Anna White of West Paris took the chair while the president delivered her annual message. The audience listened with interest as she gave a brief history of the Oxford county W.
C. T. U. organization, also her account of the state, world's and national conventions, which she attended. Suggestions for the new year's work were made and need of earnest effort emphasized.

Reports from local presidents were encouraging, also the reports of the county secretary and treasurer.
Rev. A. W. Pottle of Buckfield was present through the convention and opened the afternoon session with prayer.

Rev. Isabella MacDuff of West Paris gave an address helpful and earnest as she spoke from personal observation and plainly showed the difference financially, socially and morally between states and towns living under license or prohibition, and she left no choice for those who love righteousness but to choose the latter.

One of the most pleasing features of the sessions was when 200 school children each carrying a flag marched into the church under the leadership of Supt. C. P. Barnes and his corps of teachers. The children sang under the direction of Miss Iva McArdle, teacher of music in the public schools of Norway. The children listened to a most interesting address by Rev. Alfreda Brewster. Master Merion Tower rendered a pleasing solo, "A Bit of Love";
indeed one could say with a great hope,
as these boys and girls showed so much interest and enthusiasm, "These will be the men and women of the near future."

Wednesday evening the music was by a quartette of young people, Esther Tower, Lons Noble, Frank Moore and Mr. Robinson, and the quartette, "The Bird With a Broken Pinion," was rendered, also a duet by Misses Tower and Noble.

After Scriptures reading and prayer the president introduced Mrs. Gertrude Stevens Leavitt of Portland as the speaker of the evening, who hardly needed an introduction, as she is so well known for her own noble work also as the daughter of the National and State President, Mrs. L. M. N.
Stevens. She gave a most interesting and instructive address upon the many departments of the W. C. T. U., wherein it ministers to the welfare of the infant in its "Cradle Roll," the youth through the L. L. L., those of mature years in its Young Woman's work, to the matrons who are in active service and to the sick, bereaved and aged through the kindly ministrations of the flower mission to cheer, and the many ways of expressing loving thoughtful care. Indeed the daughter honors her noble mother. The pastors from the several churches were introduced and assured the organization of their hearty sympathy and approval of its work.

Thursday morning was given up to reports of superintendents and election of officers, the following being elected: President, Mrs. E. A. G. Stickney of Brownfield; Vice-President at large,
Mrs. Anna White of West Paris; Treas-

PRESENT TEMPERANCE MOVEMENT.

In the present temperance movement along total abstinence lines started by Editor Pattangall of the Waterville Sentinel and endorsed by an enthusiastic and representative gathering of men of all parties and religious beliefs at the recent Portland meeting attended by lawyers, editors, ministers, politicians and laymen, all interested in the promulgation of individual total abstinence throughout Maine, it is pleasing to note that Oxford county and Rumford Falls especially are intensely interested, and that Rumford Falls was the first town to ratify the movement by holding a temperance meeting Saturday night, called by clerk of courts, C. F. Whitman and attended by leading men of the county and town.

In the formation of the state league Mr. E. H. Gleason of Mexico, is taking a prominent part, and is one of a committee of seven chosen to meet at Brunswick June 1st to draw up a constitution and select a state committee of sixteen, one from each county, to perfect organization. "With one exception, the press of the state has heartily endorsed the movement, which promises to take rank with the Washington movement and other total abstinence endeavors, non-partisan and individual, which brings the question of sobriety home to the man himself irrespective of prohibitory laws and which after all is the best solution of the drink evil.

The Portland meeting adopted this pledge: "We pledge ourselves to do all within our power and personal example and influence to promote the cause of total abstinence from the use of intoxicating liquors," and the simple signing and effort to live up to this pledge is all that is requisite for enrollment in the Maine Total Abstinence League whose purpose as outlined by Editor Pattangall of Waterville is that temperance and sobriety were not only desirable, but were also the ends toward which this society was to work. His idea of the organization was to duplicate, to a certain extent, the political parties. Have a state committee consisting of a delegate from each county and from this body choose an executive committee, a chairman, secretary and treasurer. He would then branch out and organize county committees along the same lines and then clubs in the towns. The plan for the local organizations is for clubs devoid of any formalities or secret work and designed to take the place of the social clubs and embracing all their good features with, of course, the exception of the liquors.

As for a constitution, he suggested that it be very short if there be one at all, and by this means to keep the organization strictly to its work. The financial end would be taken care of by voluntary subscriptions except in the case of the town clubs, which would finance themselves.

Of the movement Editor Dingley of the Lewiston Journal, who by the way drew up the pledge, says:

It is worthy of note that many drinking men are joining the league while those who have not the drink habit are cordially welcomed. Thus a federation of those who have a thirst with those who have not a thirst is effected on a self-respecting and social basis. If organizations that are due and over-due, are scientific, as we believe this one is, this temperance league will spread through the state and create conditions essential to that which begins in good self-government.

MEMORIAL DAY.

Memorial Day is the most earthly sacred of all the days in the year for true Americans. It brings vividly to the minds the second most important trial in our National life. The long struggle of seven years gave us independence and a National existence and the infinitely more colossal and sanguinary struggle of four years saved that National existence from destruction, removed a great blot from our flag, purified our National life and gave, as Lincoln aptly expressed, "a new birth" to which, under God, is due all our present prosperity and greatness. It is, it is, it is righteous, it is justly instructive to the rising generation that once a year we should halt in the feverish career which prosperity has brought to us and impress upon the people the memory of those who sacrificed everything that men hold so dear in order to secure for them everything which they at present enjoy. The debt which the present generation owes to those men can never be too strongly impressed upon the generation of today and those which shall come after it. There would have been absolutely none of this prosperity if the men who constituted the armies from 1861 to '65 had not thrown aside all consideration of money making, all comforts of home, and dared dangers such as no other soldiers encountered, in order to save the Nation. That they did sacrifice, with such unreckoning lavishness, that they held their country higher than any other earthly thing, entitles them to the affectionate remembrance, the reverence of every one beneath the shadow of the flag. We cannot possibly give them too much honor and in honoring them, in holding them up as the highest possible patterns of manhood, we are doing the very best and wisest thing to assure the perpetuity of our Government and taking proper precautions against a recurrence of such disasters in the future.

The sentimental considerations involved in Memorial Day will be abundantly set forth by writers as the day approaches, but there is another more material view of it which is apt to be lost sight of. This is a Government of the people, for the people and by the people, but in order that it shall exist it is absolutely necessary that there shall always be a sufficiency of strong, able, resolute men, who will stand firmly for it, even to the death, fight with unflinching courage for its preservation and overcome all who, no matter under what pretext, shall attempt to overthrow it or to diminish in any way the things which make for its greatness.

Other nations have perished for lack of this. They have, as the historians say, died on account of the death of the National spirit. That is, in times of trial they have lacked men who were willing to fight and die to maintain them. We can only avoid a calamity like this by the sedulous cultivation of everything that will make for the National spirit. We must educate the rising generation and press the lesson on to the future that under God the existence of this Nation is the most sacred of all earthly things. That, whenever it is assailed it is the supreme duty of every man to unhesitatingly go to its defense, no matter what considerations of home, business and other allurements, and fight, if necessary, to the death, to preserve unimpaired that which his fathers gave everything to secure. This is no idle danger. In the years preceding 1861 our fathers thought that the Government was as secure as it now is; that all danger of war was as remote as we today think it. Few could be made to believe that such a mad act as the firing on Fort Sumpter would occur. Yet the cloud no larger than a man's hand which appeared on the horizon speedily became the most terrible of war clouds and before it was dissipated by the sunlight of peace 1,000,000 Americans were in their graves.

Whatever we may do to impress Memorial Day upon the minds of the rising generation, whatever we can say to instill into their hearts the sense of loyalty to the death to our flag, will bear most abundant fruit in all the years to come in securing peace, stability and prosperity to this country. It is every American citizen's duty to help make the most of Memorial Day. It does not matter whether he is represented in any cemetery by a relative or not. It is for his own selfish interest, and that he and his children and his children's children may continue to sit in peace and comfort under his own vine and fig tree, that he shall join with the rest in doing all that he can to make Memorial Day profoundly impressive upon the hearts and minds of everyone. —National Tribune.

Oxford county should be interested with other counties of the state in the efforts of the recently formed Maine Farm Product company of which Hon. F. O. Beal of Bangor, is president, to stock the farms of Maine with sheep either by sale or lease. The company plans to bring from the West this season into Maine about 10,000 of the best sheep to be found of the wool bearing variety and already the company is taking orders for distribution. The raising of sheep is an industry which has long been neglected by the farmers, and one which can be made very profitable. There are hundreds of acres of land which are of no use whatever now and which will make the best kind of pasturage for sheep. The industry will be given a good start by bringing in the best sheep to be had and the farmers will be given a chance to stock their farms with these sheep at a reasonable cost. The possibilities of sheep raising in this part of Maine can readily be seen and the reputation of the men who are back of this project is enough to insure its success.

A SWASEY STORY.

There has not been much in the way of humor cropping out in the dry cases at the present term of the Supreme Judicial Court in Rumford Falls first term and Hon. John P. Swasey is always looked upon as good for one occasionally. In the Wills-Tardiff horse case recently in which he was counsel for Wills who recovered $500, Mr. Swasey in referring to the contention of the defense that the fault lay with the fractious horse driven by Phil Ash, who was racing with Tardiff, the gentleman from Canton, who is somewhat of a horseman himself, said: "Why, gentlemen of the jury, I know something of this Ash horse and of his peculiar characteristics because I once owned that horse, wintered and summered him, and I tell you gentlemen that I also know this defendant, and that the more I see of this man the more I think of that horse."

ARE YOU GOING TO JAMESTOWN THIS SUMMER?

I take this opportunity of answering the above question which has been asked me by scores of people during the past two months.

It is not surprising that so many people are asking for a Jamestown tour this season, for leaving the Exposition out of the question, there is hardly a tour to be had on the American continent affording so much of interest and value for the time and money as a tour to the Jamestown Exposition.

TIME.

The first party will leave Portland on Friday, June 21st. The time covered will be 9 days from Portland, with 2 1/2 days in Washington, 2 days at Jamestown, 1/2 day in Philadelphia, and a day in New York.

COST OF TOUR.

The cost of the tour will be $16.50 from Portland. This will include the round trip railroad and steamboat fare; hotels in New York, Washington and Norfolk; staterooms on all steamers; automobile transfer to and from hotel in Washington; admission to the Exposition and all meals except supper on the Fall River boat on return. The price named is for two in a room at hotels and on steamboats.

RESERVATION.

Owing to the large amount of travel anticipated by the steamship lines they require reservations several weeks in advance. Hence it will be necessary for any desiring to take this tour to register as soon as possible.

ITINERARY.

Friday, June 21.—Leave Union Station, Portland, over the Eastern Division of the Boston and Maine at 12:45 p. m. Arrive in Boston at 4:10 p. m. Supper in South Station dining room, take the elevator. Leave Boston at 6 p. m. in special cars, connecting at Fall River with Fall River line of steamers for New York. Stateroom keys received on train.

The approach to New York is from Long Island Sound through Hell Gate up the East River, passing Blackwell's Island and under the Brooklyn and Williamsburg suspension bridges, around the Battery, in full sight of the Statue of Liberty, and up the North River to Pier 19. The approach of New York Harbor affords a scene never to be forgotten. Upon arrival the party will be transferred at once by special ferry to Jersey City, N. J., where breakfast will be had in the station dining room, and special cars will be taken at 5:12 over the Baltimore and Ohio Railway for Washington. This is one of the finest equipped railroads in the country, and the run between New York and Washington will be made in 5 hours, arriving in that most delightful city on the continent, at 1:12 p. m., and transfer by automobile to the hotel.

Saturday afternoon, Sunday and Monday in Washington. These days will be brim full of sightseeing. Vernon, Alexandria, etc., at special rates for any who may desire them, also an automobile tour of the city may be had at a moderate price.

Leave Monday at 6:30 p. m. for a delightful sail down the Potomac by moonlight (full moon June 23th). This is one of the most charming features of the tour, and whoever enjoys this sail will ever recall it with almost an irresistible longing to see it again. Down the Potomac through the Chesapeake bay, to the sea, every mile of the journey is past scenes closely identified with the birth, growth, and struggles of a mighty nation. In the luxury of modern travel nothing can surpass the service of the Norfolk and Washington Steamboat Co. between Washington, Fortress Monroe, Newport News and Norfolk.

Tuesday, June 25.—Arrive at Norfolk at 7 a. m. Tuesday and Wednesday at the Exposition. Headquarters at the Inside Inn. In the Jamestown Exposition, nature and man have combined to create a territory supremely attractive. The grounds cover an

From the foregoing brief outline of this tour I am sure that all will readily see that I am offering an excellent trip for the time and price. I have tried to divide the time in such a way as to use it to the best possible advantage at the various points along the route, and certainly all will agree that the nine days spent on this trip will be nine days of unalloyed pleasure and profit.

I have gone quite carefully into the matter as to the early completion of the Exposition grounds and the chance of favorable weather, and am sure that I have selected the most desirable date for an early summer tour. I am assured that the grounds will be practically completed by June 20th and am told that the latter part of June will be one of the most ideal seasons of the whole year to visit the coast of Virginia. I hope to make this one of the largest parties and best tours of the season.

OTHER TOURS.

Besides this tour I shall make one the last of August, also one in September, October and possibly November. One of these will include Gettysburg and another will include Atlantic from Boston to Norfolk and up the Potomac to Washington, rail to New York, steamer up the Hudson to Albany, rail to Niagara Falls and Toronto, steamer down the St. Lawrence, through the Lachine Rapids to Montreal and rail to Portland and Boston.

This tour will be arranged about Sept. 15th if sufficient number desire such a tour to make it possible. I would, therefore, ask any interested in such a tour to write me.

In short will all who have been planning to visit Jamestown this season write me, stating when they desire to go and I am sure that I can interest them.

Finally, let all seekers of pleasure by travel understand that it will be many a day before another opportunity to get so much for so little money will be afforded as is afforded this year in the Jamestown trip, and I would say further, to any who may be attracted by anything that I may have to offer that I shall endeavor, as I have done in the past, to give those who join me the very best time that rests with my power to give, and whether or not I have succeeded in the past in satisfying and pleasing those who have traveled with me, I leave it for them to state.

I shall be very glad to answer all questions concerning the June tour or any of those that are to follow, and at this end address,

E. C. BOWLER, Bethel, Me.

RED RIDING HOOD'S RESCUE

Some of the leading characters are taken by Laura and Annie McManis, Raynes Stearns and Harold McManis.

TENANT HAD DEPARTED

Owing to the attention to a certain house at Smith's Crossing by elegantly men at the meeting in Portland recently of the Maine Missionary Society, the tenant has vacated the house and there is every reason to believe that the house will not again be rented for the purpose used. So much publicity, as told in the CITIZEN last week.

MAY TERM OF COURT CLOSES

around them.

The Jackson books as belt fasteners had been in use in the mill but were removed all but those on belts where Perkins worked. The defense insisted that there was a safe way provided Perkins to go about the machinery without going beneath the belting. It is said that when the jury was inspecting the room where Perkins met his death three of them, in leaving, passed beneath the belt where Perkins met his death, as it was the handiest way, evidently. The arguments on both sides were able and the charge of Judge Peabody a clear and masterful elucidation of the relative responsibilities of employer and employee from a legal standpoint.

The following divorces were granted: Verna Smith from Clinton L. Smith both of Canton, for gross habits of intoxication and cruel and abusive treatment.

Lizzie A. Cummings of Canton, from Carvasso Cummings of Buckfield, confessed habits of intoxication and cruel treatment.

Annie M. Wilson of Batchelder's Grant, from Warren Wilson of Lyman, Mass., utter desertion. The custody of minor child given to mother to await further order of court.

The most tedious trial of the term which dragged its slow length through almost three days finished Saturday with a verdict for the defendant town of Mexico in a suit for damages brought by Leon La Pierre on account of damage of water onto his premises, situated on the Porter bridge road, in 1905, alleged to have been caused by the substitution of a pipe for a culvert which was built in 1869, the claim being that the pipe did not properly drain a low area above the plaintiff's house. Hon. John P. Swasey was counsel for La Pierre and Judge A. E. Stearns represented the town of Mexico.

As it was necessary to use an interpreter for the testimony of La Pierre and some of his witnesses progress was slow, and many amusing answers were given from which at times the jury were in doubt whether the Swift river had its source in the pond near the La Pierre house or that the gravitation laws had reversed and water was running up hill in that vicinity. One fact, however, remained clear from La Pierre's testimony and that of his neighbors. In spring, fall, and every rainy seasons Mons. Pierre could not complain about the insufficiency of water for fire protection either in his cellar or in his front yard. In fact, he was surrounded by water and this was the gravamen of his complaint. He did not fancy going after a hod of coal with a boat in his cellar, nor did he relish Venetian canals in his front yard. The instability of his real estate was another thing that made life unpleasant on the Porter bridge road. It became tiresome carting his farm land back over the hill where the spring freshets washed it, and from a social standpoint, neighbors were not pleased with the necessity of wearing rubber boots when making calls during the rainy season.

The plaintiff's counsel contended that there was a natural water course leading from the low ground where the water formed a large full grown pond, and that the town of Mexico had erred in providing a proper channel for it. The defense claimed that it was not a natural water course but that surface water caused the trouble whose drainage could not be properly regulated or controlled by the town's engineering plans. There was an elaborate citation of legal authorities by Judge Stearns on surface water. The jury was out two hours struggling with the water problem, finally concluding that the plaintiff was not damaged as claimed.

This was quickly followed by a case in which the ubiquitous, suave and hypnotic book agent occupied the stage. He had sold a Mexico man a thirty-six dollar set of books on The Science of Railways. The victim had signed a contract for same, and when the books came the man claimed he couldn't find anything scientific in them and they were besides not in accordance with the sample copy shown. The victim was Weston U. Toothaker and the plaintiff The World Ry. Pub. Co. Mr. Toothaker is a locomotive engineer and said that a book agent called upon him and showing him a volume said to represent the latest work on railroad engineering he was induced to sign an order for a set costing thirty-six dollars consisting of twelve volumes, to be paid for in installments. The first occasion he had to consult the work was on automatic air brakes. The work was so ancient that there was only the slightest reference to air brakes. It was equally ancient on modern railway topics, but elaborated on the "pony express" which carried the mails over a century ago. Besides the books were dissimilar in material value to the sample. He notified the local representative that he didn't want the books and later wrote the publishing company.

Other expert engineers and railroad men testified to the worthlessness of the work as a reference and said that they had been bitten also.

Mr. Swasey scored heavily on the persuasive book agent, lightning rod agents and agents in general, who induced people to sign a paper in such schemes. Attorney Foster argued on the contract as it stood and the failure of the defendant to offer to rescind the contract within a reasonable time. There was surprise when the jury, who evidently thoroughly enjoyed the rhetorical extigation of the genus book agent, found in his favor.

The court room was photographed Saturday while court was in session by Fred E. Randall, a flash light being used. In the explosion of the light Mr.

Rendall suffered severe burns on his right hand, which necessitated a surgeon's attention.

Court sat till six o'clock Saturday afternoon and resumed at 9:30 Monday morning, Judge Peabody being anxious to expedite matters and adjourn the middle of this week.

MEXICO AND RIDLONVILLE.

The Week's News as Gathered by our Special Correspondent.

Saturday, May 19th the Mexico High School base ball team went to Dixfield to play against the Dixfields. Mexico won by a score of 12 to 10 regardless of the older players who helped the Dixfield's out.

Mrs. Oldham of Phillips is visiting her many friends and relatives in town.

Work is progressing fast on Mr. Casey's new house on Mexico Avenue. There was a large attendance in Mexico High School circus day, only three pupils being present, and according to all reports the other rooms did not fare much better.

The Grange Circle meets with Mrs. Elliott on Harlow Hill road June 6th. Anyone crossing the Gibson Flat ball grounds Saturday afternoon would have come across Prof. Rigby with his juvenile band, training for marching, and for a first attempt, it would not be a disgrace to their elders. Several of the boys belong in Mexico.

The Laurel Club met with Mrs. Johnson of Osgood Avenue May 23rd, and a good time enjoyed. Refreshments consisting of sandwiches, cake and coffee were served.

Edward L. Stephens went to South Rangelay fishing last week.

THE MASK OF HEALTH.

Few People Are Really as Well as They Look. Cause and Remedy.

Many people in Rumford Falls and Canton, both men and women, who believe themselves to be in perfect health, are often in the greatest danger.

The most common cause of ill health is indigestion, with a myriad of symptoms such as headache, sleeplessness, specks before the eyes, pains in the back and side, distress after eating, etc.

In the last few years the success of physicians everywhere with Mifona stomach tablets has made them known far and wide as the acknowledged specific for the treatment of stomach diseases. They strengthen the digestive organs so that in a few days the stomach is in such shape that it takes care itself of all the food that is eaten without pain or distress.

The Cote Pharmacy Rumford Falls, and Nathan Reynolds of Canton give an absolute unqualified guarantee that your money will be refunded unless Mifona cures. They take the whole risk and the remedy will not cost you a penny unless it cures you.

PATSY AND THE FAIRY

A Halloween Happening.

By Scummas MacManus

'Twas this was the way of it.

At the time when the Great Fishin' was at a height that it had not held for a score of years gone, creatin' full and plenty throughout the country, Patsy Hogan was a blacksmith living all by his lee-alone in a little cabin at the cross roads in Mullinafad.

He was, one night dhravin' on mid-night, sittin' in his bare soles by the fire, after he had put from him his shoes and socks, and was smoking his last pipe as he warmed his toes afore turning into bed—of all nights in the year it was Hallowe'en night—on which the fairies power—when Patsy hears, coming over the hard road with-out, the sound of a pony galloping at an adious rate, an' with one shoe clinkin', clinkin' as it come.

The galloping suddenly stopped fair in front of his own house, and a horse whinnied, and a hurried step came to the door, and then the knock of some one in mighty haste entirely, and a voice said:

"Patsy Rogan, is it in bed you are—or out of it?"

Me brave Patsy was at the door in a jiffy, and had it opened, and was looking out in the dark, and replying: "In troth, and it's out of it I am. Won't you step in and light your pipe, whoever you are, an' tell me what I can do for you?"

"No, no," said the voice in the dark without, "I have no time for that. I am on a life and death errand, an' my pony is losing his shoe, and cannot carry me farther without it's fastened. Can you bring out a candle and drive a nail in it for me?"

"Make haste, make haste," says the voice, "or I'll be late."

Poor Patsy lost no time till he was out with a lit candle, and had his hammer and his shoe-box out of the quickly, ready for his work. And as the pony was led up to him he was habbergasted at the wonderful small size of the little red-haired man, and the wonderful small size of his pony, too.

"Make haste," says the little man, says he, "Make haste, or I'll be late."

"Not if I can help it, my good man," says Patsy, says he, an' he had the animal's right fore foot between his knees 'fore ye could say knife, an' was fittin' into the shoe the finest nails he could pick from his box. He finished fixin' the shoe, an' says he, "Now, me man, says he, droppin' the pony's foot, 'that shoe 'll carry you a good hundred miles without both-erin' another blacksmith."

"It'll need to," says the little red fellow, says he, "for that's the distance I have to cover between now an' an hour after midnight. How much is the damagot?" says he.

"Me charge?" says Patsy, says he.

"For what would I be makin' a charge?" says he, then, scornfully that way, for Patsy was a mainly fellow, "Is it to charge strangers that's late on the road, for dhrivin' a few nails in a loose shoe, I would? Don't speak about charges if you don't mean to offend me, but jump on your horse, poor fellow; for if you are on a life and death errand, and have a hundred miles to make afore an hour after mid- night, I admire your grit," says he, "but pity your plight, an' I wish to God," says he, "that every dozen miles of them was only one."

When Patsy mentioned the name, he noticed that the little fellow started, and trembled to his toes, and: "Don't mention that name," says he, "as you pity me." This took a square rise out of Patsy, an' only he found himself glued to the ground he would have staggered. The little fellow jumped on his pony's back, and putting his hand to his waistcoat pocket, he drew something from it that jingled, and threw them on the ground at Patsy's feet, and says he: "Me good man, when you are so generous as to make no charge to a stranger, you will be paid ten fold; there is ten sovereigns, and a word of advice with them is, lose no time getting them changed."

"Patsy Rogan, you are a descent man—descent out of the ordinary, an' I'd be sorry you'd think me short or surly about the affair I'm bent on."

"Oh, no, no, no!" says Patsy, says he, "Good man, I wouldn't dream of thinkin' you short or surly. I wouldn't pry into affairs that aren't mine," says he. "I shouldn't, and don't want to know anything of them."

"They're as much your affairs," says the little fellow, says he, "as they are mine; and me heart smote me, an' great as me hurry was, I couldn't push on me journey till I'd come back, and told ye all."

"For long years now, as ye know," says he, "the herrings in their thousands of shoals have been fillin' the Irish bays fetchin' with them full and plenty to the land, and all the while the bays of Scotland have been fien- less; and on account of how things have been, the fairies of Ireland were glad and happy, and all the fairies of Scotland were unhappy and jealous, and their jealousy grew greater and greater, bitterer and bitterer, year by year, till now it has come to the breakin' point, and they have declared war upon the Irish fairies for the possession of the herring fisheries, and this night there is to be a hundred miles from here, a great pitched battle between the fairies of Ireland and the fairies of Scotland—a battle that will decide for long years to come whether the herrings will remain in the Irish bays or desert them for the bays of Scotland."

Poor Patsy Rogan, as may well be supposed, showed mighty concern at this, and right well the little man observed it. Says he:

"You are very much concerned, I notice, and it is well you may be so, for the happiness of Ireland is hanging by a thread this minute. I cannot stay longer with ye," says he, "but must be away, and before I go I want you to understand that the man to whom you did a service this night is him whom the Irish fairies await to lead them on, and head them in battle. At dawn of day, to-morrow morning," says he, "if you look into the water of my pony's tracks, and see that it is clear, you may know that we have won the battle, and that Ireland will have the fish. But, if, on the other hand," says he, "you see the water in the hoof-tracks bloody; then woe, woe! to the poor fisher folk of Ireland—the Irish fairies have been de- feated and the herri's will be leaving the harbors."

And he put spurs to his horse and like a blast of wind he was gone, leavin' poor Patsy Rogan standin' gupin' after him with his mouth open. Patsy turned on his heel, shuffled into his house, and sat down by the fire till by and by he was wakened out of the half dreaming sort of way in which he had been, by a great bugle-call. And he ran out of the house as hard as he could, and then there was another bugle-call, and another, every one of them louder than the first. And all the people of the countryside had been drawn out of their beds in mortal fright; an' they were all out, too, like Patsy, an' they lookin' up into the sky where the bugle calls were coming from. But not a thing could they see at all, at all. Only then, after the bugle calls they seemed to hear bands playing fighting tunes, and overhead, the quick tramping of men, and the neighing and prancing of horses, and the roars and the shouts of thousands; then the clink and clatter of steel, and then the cries and the groans, and the moans of others mingling with the din—all seemin' to happen somewhere far up in the sky.

And the smith, whose terror was not light, kep' walkin' about as if he was on harrow-pins, an' him prayin' God to bless the Irish fairies with victory. The first streak of dawn found Patsy bent over the hoof tracks an' examin' them. An' behold yet he found them one an' all, blood red as a winter's sunset! The great fisheries had never been greater than they were just at that time in every bay in the Irish coast, and a sprightly man might easy walk completely around Ireland without putting foot either on water or dry land, simply stepping from fishing boat to fishing boat around the coast, but within a week from the night of the sky battle there was weeping and wailing, for a boat might shoot its nets at night, and lift them in the morning, and find sorra a fin in all of them. And the great Irish herrin' fisheries disappeared from that day. Whereas Scotland suddenly became noted for its fishin', an' its new found fame was in no hurry to desert it.

And the sovereigns oh, the sovereigns! Patsy Rogan was so dumfounded by all happenings that he forgot to change one of his sovereigns ad- rected (which is the sure and only way of holdin' by fairy gold), and forgot every mortal thing about them till some time in the next day. And then when he slipped his hand into his waistcoat pocket where he had put them, he pulled out—ten withered beech leaves.

There wasn't great sore on Patsy for the loss of the ten sovereigns, for he was a man who never had his heart in money, but there was sore and mighty sore on him—and small wonder—for the woe of calamity that had come on the country, a calamity that the poor fisher folk of Ireland have lived long years to lament.

But some day the Irish fairies, who have, through all these years been rest- ing and gathering their strength, will march on Scotland, and pit themselves another time against the fairies of that country, for the possession of the her- rings.

And God send that the Irish fairies may succeed says I.

THE JAMESTOWN EXPOSI-

TION.

The Jamestown Exposition, which opened on April 26th, 1907, promises to be one of the most interesting of the larger expositions which have been held in later years. Its location at Sewell's Point, on the historic Hampton Roads, some nine miles from the city of Nor- folk, Virginia, and directly opposite Old Point Comfort, in itself will appeal to many, and the magnificent array of warships that will congregat here from all the countries of the world will at- tract a tremendous number of people from all parts of the American con- tinent, as well as from abroad. To Canadians who have not had the priv- ilege of visiting the south this event will be the best opportunity that will present itself, and the low transporta- tion rates that are offered will lend an additional attraction.

The only Canadian exhibit at this great fair will be that of the Grand Trunk Railway System, who have erected a building of their own, in which the resources and attractive fea- tures of Canada will be shown, and at which building Canadians will be wel- come, and where all information may be obtained. Another feature that is offered is the many different routes that can be taken to this Exposition from Canada, including rail, river and ocean journeys. The true hospitality of the Southern people, the historicity that surrounds the locality, and the many things to see and do, should be the means of inducing a large number to go from the north. Grand Trunk Agents will gladly give information as to rates and routes.

TOTAL ABSTINENCE.

E. H. Gleason of Mexico Prominent in New State Movement.

Mr. E. H. Gleason of Mexico, attended the recent total abstinence meeting in Portland formed for the purpose of promoting individual sobriety by organized effort throughout the state and returned confident that the movement will result in one of the greatest good for the state at large. Mr. Gleason was chosen one of a committee of seven to meet at Brunswick June 1st to draw up a state constitution and perfect organization.

The plan for organization, which was mapped out roughly, is to have a state committee, the members of which shall be chairmen, ex-officio, of the county organizations. Clubs will be formed in the towns and will be of a social character without formality. The members pledge themselves to use their best efforts to promote total abstinence from intoxicating liquors.

Mr. Gleason was among the speakers advocating the movement and plan started by Editor Pattangall of Waterville, and addresses were made by Editor Dingley of the Lewiston Journal, Howard Owen of the Portland Press, George W. Norton of the Portland Express and many others.

The committee to meet at Brunswick are: Alexander T. Laughlin and George W. Norton of Portland; Luther R. Moore of Saco; Frank L. Dingley of Lewiston; Elwin H. Gleason of Mexico; Lyman L. Walton of Skowhegan and William R. Pattangall of Waterville.

Editor Pattangall outlining the proposed organization stated that to his mind it was accepted by all that temperance and sobriety were not only desirable, but were also the ends towards which this society was to work. His idea of the organization was to duplicate, to a certain extent, the political parties. Have a state committee consisting of a delegate from each county and from that body choose an executive committee, a chairman, secretary and treasurer. He would then branch out and organize county committees along the same lines and then clubs in the towns. The plan for the local organizations is for clubs devoid of any formalities or secret work and designed to take the place of the social clubs and embracing all their good features with, of course, the exception of the liquors.

As for a constitution, he suggested that it be very short if there be one at all, and by this means to keep the organization strictly to its work. The financial end would be taken care of by voluntary subscriptions except in the case of the town clubs, which would finance themselves.

The following pledge was adopted: "We pledge ourselves to do all within our power and personal example and influence to promote the cause of total abstinence from the use of intoxicating liquors."

Mr. Gleason said that the movement would be pushed vigorously in Oxford county and that meetings similar to the one held in Odd Fellows Hall here Saturday night would be followed by others in the towns of Oxford county.

PETTINGILL PARTY AT HOME AGAIN.

Delightful Three Months European Trip of Hon. Waldo Pettingill, Wife and Daughter.

After a three months' trip to Europe Hon. Waldo Pettingill, Mrs. Pettingill and their daughter, Miss Elizabeth, arrived home in Rumford Falls Monday morning at 11:35, coming by way of Montreal, and for hours Mr. Pettingill was busy shaking hands with his fellow townsmen and receiving congratulations on the safe return of his party.

To the CITIZEN Mr. Pettingill said: "I had, indeed, a most splendid trip which was of great benefit to me physically, as I am about twenty pounds lighter than when I left, and our party enjoyed themselves thoroughly throughout Europe sight seeing.

"We reached Genoa in June weather which we had all through our trip, although there was snow at Naples the last winter which is very unusual for that climate. We went to Rome, Florence, Venice, Milan and other famous Italian cities enjoying the wonders of art there shown and went on to beautiful Nice.

"From thence we went to Paris by auto, a matter of a thousand miles through a most beautiful country, affording a much better opportunity for sight seeing than by any other mode of travel. The roads are superb and the autos of the highest type. The journey into France gives one a chance to see the farms and farmers and I was not particularly struck with the prosperity of some sections we passed through.

"In Paris we remained some time and there we saw more autos grouped at the Longchamps race course one day than I ever hope to see in my lifetime again. There was a solid mile of them three and four deep. The crowds more than the races interested me and certainly the Parisians are a gay people.

"We spent five days in London at the Hotel Cecil and one day we made a trip out to Oxford University. I must say that England is by far the finest country we saw on our trip. I had letters of introduction from Secretary Root to our ambassadors and consuls which aided us greatly in seeing Europe. I ran across several Maine people. T. R. Savage of Bangor and party we ran across in France, and it was like meeting Rumford Falls neighbors. We just missed the Irish Stetson party from Bangor also.

"The weather was delightful all through Europe and we thoroughly enjoyed every moment of our trip, both on the ocean and on land. Our passages across the big pond were especially

MEMORIAL SUNDAY.

Rev. E. W. Webber Addresses the Sons of Veterans and
W. R. C.

At the Universalist church Sunday afternoon there was a Memorial service preceding Memorial Day which was attended in a body by the Woman's Relief Corps and George D. Bisbee, Camp Sons of Veterans, and a congregation which filled the edifice. It was the first appearance of the Sons of Veterans, recently formed, and they marched to the church accompanied by Col. Bisbee after whom the corps was named, and with the Woman's Relief Corps occupied the seats in front. A delegation of veterans of Mexico was also present.

A special musical program opened the service, conducted by Rev. E. W. Webber, the pastor, who delivered a notable address on the significance of Memorial Day, closing with the audience standing and singing America.

Mr. Webber's plea was for a better observance of Memorial Day, more patriotic in character, a greater reverence for the heroes who died that the Union might be retained, and that the coming generation of assimilated nationalities might through example of the sons and daughters of the soldiers respect the principles of freedom for which they gave up their lives and thus perpetuate that spirit of loyalty to the flag which invites all nations' peoples to breathe the air of freedom of personal liberty, free religious thought, free press and all that uplifts man.

He called attention to the observance of Memorial Day in the South which seems in his opinion to bear a more patriotic significance than in the North of today, where the day is given over to sports and amusements which tend towards forgetfulness of the real import of the great day of memory to patriotism made sacred by the blood shed by brothers in civil strife.

There would soon come the time when there would no longer appear in the ranks the veterans paying tributes of flowers and speech to their comrades and it devolved upon the sons and daughters of those veterans to keep alive the beautiful custom whose death will rob the nation of the spirit of patriotism so beautifully observed in the South.

The war's close ended the strife, bitter and sorrowful between North and South and standing alone as the figure immortal of conquering heroes was Grant at Appomattox, with tears instead of jeers for the vanquished who surrendered their arms yielding to God's eternal justice.

The day should command more attention from the rising generation lest they forget its significance, and the principle fought for, which has made this the world's greatest nation, the refuge of all the oppressed peoples, and there is no better way to keep this spirit alive than by the formation of societies of the sons, daughters and wives of those who fought that the Union may be saved for all time for the regeneration of the world, through its God given liberty.

pleasure and all of our party enjoyed good health. For myself I never felt better in my life and the trip was very beneficial to me from a physical standpoint. Still there is no place like home and the sight of the dear old Oxford hills was the most welcome of the trip. It seems good to get back to Rumford Falls where our friends are, to grasp the hands of our fellow townsmen and to see the warm welcome extended to the home comers."

MERCHANTS' ASSOCIATION.

Business Men Discuss Matters of Moment to Rumford Falls.

In the municipal court room Monday night the Merchants' Association of Rumford Falls discussed several things of interest, among which were the giving of premiums to induce trade, the abolition of street corner peddlers, early closing, an enlarged membership and an endeavor to get the merchants better acquainted with each other for mutual benefit and advancement.

President E. K. Day was in the chair. It was voted to close Congress Street stores beginning June 1st at six o'clock Monday, Tuesday, Thursday and Friday, open Wednesday and Saturday evenings, and a committee was appointed to call upon several merchants not members and get them enrolled in the association. A committee will also consult with the selectmen regarding the abolition of street corner sales by itinerant peddlers.

The giving of premiums was discussed and was opposed, and some cases were called to the attention of the association and an effort will be made to prevent the starting again of premium offers in the stores in any form. The need of an occasional supper of all the business men to get better acquainted with each other was talked over, also a business men's club was mentioned as a desirable object.

FESTIVAL CHORUS.

Rumford Falls Singers Score Big Success at Opera House.

"I congratulate Rumford Falls, her chorus, her conductor Mr. Charles A. Milner, and the pianist Mr. A. F. Cushman," said Wm. R. Chapman, conductor of the Maine Festival Chorus enthusiastically on the stage of the Cheney Opera House at the concert of the Rumford Falls Festival Chorus, Friday evening, before a representative audience of 400 people. "And I propose that we give a hand also in honor of Mr. McMaster, whose great work in the musical line among you has been so important," and the audience applauded loudly.

Mr. Chapman went on to explain the great work the Maine choruses are doing and again paid a tribute to the work of the local chorus. He announced that the great Calve had been secured as the star of the October festival at a cost of $6,000 for her appearance in Bangor and Portland, and that tickets would go on sale June 15th.

The concert was a great success both from an artistic point and from the enthusiastic manner in which the efforts of the artists and choruses were received from the audience, each number being encored.

The chorus showed that its hard work had not been without results, a great improvement being apparent.

Mr. Chapman's artists were naturally encored time and again, especially Hans Kronold whose cello solos held the audience spellbound and he was compelled by the long continuous applause to respond with selections not on the program. Of the singers who have appeared here probably Thomas Henderson, the tenor, won his way deepest into the people's hearts singing old ballads of the people with such feeling as to start the tears from some eyes. Miss Aline Glass, contralto, had a pleasing voice. Miss Agnes Haven Russell of Portland assisted greatly in the chorus, her beautiful soprano adding in sustaining its power and strength.

Following was the program:

Festival Chorus.
"Romance & Tarentelle," Paganini
Mr. Hans Kronold.
"What Is More Gentle," Gilchrist
Festival Chorus.

(a) "Father O'Ryan," Old Irish

CONFIRMED NEARLY FIVE HUNDRED PERSONS.

Bishop Walsh Had Busy Visit to Rumford Falls and Chisholm This Week.

Sunday last was one of the busiest and most strenuous days yet experienced by Bishop Louis F. Walsh of the see of Portland. He spent the afternoon last summer, preaching six sermons in French and English at Chisholm and Rumford Falls which he reached by special train Sunday afternoon and officiating at the confirmation Sunday and Monday of nearly five hundred persons. Bishop Walsh paid his first official visit to this section of Maine and was truly astonished by the progress of the Catholic church as evidenced by the confirmation of such a large number in the faith.

Sunday, he celebrated mass and spoke at the Catholic church at Chisholm where at the last mass he administered the sacrament of confirmation to two hundred and ten candidates. There were great crowds at all the masses many attending from Livermore Falls and other places. Bishop Walsh highly complimented Father Desjardines, pastor of the Catholic church at Chisholm, on the growth of the parish and the great work that was being done for the people in a religious way. Accompanied by Father Desjardines the bishop came to Rumford Falls on a special train, reaching here about four o'clock p. m., and proceeding at once to the church of St. John The Baptist where he was met by the pastor, Rev. Father Lafamme and by Father Barry of the St. Athanasius church in the presence of a great throng of people.

The rite of confirmation was then administered to two hundred and forty-one children, the little girls in their white dresses, wreaths and veils presenting a pretty picture.

Bishop Walsh spoke in French and English to the congregation commenting the parish on their progressive work in building their handsome edifice now in course of construction, and paying a tribute to the pastor, Father Lafamme for his tireless work in the parish.

Monday morning the bishop celebrated mass at St. John The Baptist church, Father Lafamme acting as deacon and Father Desjardines as sub-deacon in the presence of a very large congregation.

At nine o'clock Bishop Walsh went over to St. Athanasius church where Father Barry had in waiting a class of thirty-eight to be confirmed, which was performed in the presence of a congregation that overflowed the edifice. Among those confirmed in the faith at the French church was Judge A. E. Stearns.

Following the ceremony the bishop met the clergy at the home of Father Barry where dinner was served and a conference on church matters held. Bishop Walsh was greatly impressed with Rumford Falls and its rapid growth and future possibilities and was especially pleased by the wonderful development of the church and the progress of the two parishes here. The building of the new granite church in the French parish was especially interesting to him and he expressed his pleasure with the great work being done in this busy section of Maine by the clergy and members of the Catholic church.

Monday afternoon accompanied by Rev. Fathers Lafamme, Barry and Desjardines, Bishop Walsh went to the Rangley Lake region for a brief visit and rest.
